

Clinical Interview — Grayson Wheatley Analysis

Part 4: Large and small cubes

The student is not able to reason through this problem. I provide assistance and together an answer is obtained. Her actions on this task are further evidence of the lack of development of her inherent mathematical reasoning. Under proper instruction, there is no doubt that this student could have solved this task easily.