

Keith Carter

Keith Carter, the creator of Orlok, the Vampire in 3D, is a Native American of Coharie descent. Mr. Carter began his career illustrating for a comic book company called Silver Wolf Comics. Since then, his work has appeared in such publications as The Washington Post, USA TODAY and National Geographic. In the mid-nineties, Mr. Carter began a career in animation with a D.C.-based studio called News In Motion. While working with clientele such as Disney, NFL, CNN, FOX and Lucas Films, Mr. Carter developed his craft for animated storytelling. He is also the creator/ animator of the Emmy Award-winning campaign 'Savingsman' for ABC. His latest film, "The New adventures of Captain Amazing-Lad," was released this past August. Keith Carter's parents are Richard Carter and Shirley Jacobs Carter. His grandparents are Ammie Jacobs and Thelma Simmons Jacobs.